History: The national Woman's Christian Temperance Union grew out of the Woman's Crusade of 1873-1874 and was founded in Cleveland, Ohio in November 1874. Unions were founded in California the following year. In 1883, the Grand Lodge of Good Templars invited WCTU President Frances Willard to personally organize the first WCTU unions in Southern California: San Diego, Santa Barbara, and Santa Ana. Due to the difficulty many southern members experienced in traveling to state conventions, at the 1884 California state WCTU convention southern California member May Louis Hart Gould called for the organization of a separate Southern California union. The new WCTU of Southern California consisted of the counties of San Luis Obispo, Kern, Ventura, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, San Diego, and San Bernardino. Gould was instrumental in securing a donation of land from the Good Templars at Broadway and Temple Streets in Los Angeles, where the new union established its headquarters. When railroad and communications improved, Kern and San Luis Obispo rejoined the Northern California WCTU, though San Luis Obispo later returned to the Southern California union.

Description of the Collection:

The Records of the WCTU of Southern California date from 1884, when the California Union was divided into separate Northern and Southern administrative units, to about 2008. These comprehensive records shed light on the structure, scope, and activities of a large branch of a national women's organization over the course of 125 years. Of particular interest is the division of administration into state, county, and local units, providing a range of demographic data and emphasizing similarities and differences throughout Southern California.

Records consist of materials from state, county, federation (three or four counties considered as one), and local (city or town-level) unions. This layered administrative structure, established by the National WCTU and replicated across the country, provided the organizational rationale for processing the collection. In addition to the Administrative Records, which make up the bulk of the collection, there are four additional series: Serials; Audio/visual; Ephemera; and Artifacts.

Administrative Records consist of more than 44 cubic feet of documents, correspondence files, reports, financials, and promotional materials organized into seven sub-series: State, County/Federation, Local, Unidentified, Biographical, Oversize, and Oversize Flat. Although date ranges vary, state Board of Trustees records are the most extensive (1889-1988, with gaps), followed by state Executive Committee records (1885-1990, with gaps) and annual state yearbooks (also called annual reports or annual meeting minutes; 1884-1995, with gaps). Geographically, Los Angeles city and county have the most extensive records.

The State records document the Southern California WCTU activities under the jurisdiction of the State president, such as the Board of Trustees, Executive Committee, Loyal Temperance Legion, state-wide departments and bureaus; and reports and records (yearbooks, annual reports) from state conventions. turn, County/Federation records, arranged in alphabetical order by County or Federation name, document the work administered at the level of the county or group of counties, and Local union records—including many hand-written meeting minutes—detail the work of the union or unions that existed in individual towns or cities. Local records are arranged alphabetically by town name, or, in some cases when there was more than one union in a town, by the name the union chose to identify itself.

Biographical Files, which are organized alphabetically by surname, contain material by and about prominent WCTU members throughout Southern California. Oversize and Oversize Flat materials have been separated from other sub-series in Administrative Records because of size. These include scrapbooks, proclamations, and commonplace books of newspaper and magazine clippings, and are organized into the same geographical and biographical divisions. Researchers should consult this sub-series after checking items of interest in other sub-series. Some “see also” notes have been provided when the connection would otherwise have been lost.

Serials include the regular publications of the Southern California WCTU’s state-wide newsletter. (Annual Yearbooks published at the state level are included in the Administrative Records series).

Audiovisuals consists mostly of print photographs and photo albums but also includes a CD, a DVD, a vinyl record album, and computer disks. Ephemera are mostly postcards. The Artifacts series of three-dimensional items is largely unprocessed.
